

Time Markers – Present Perfect Progressive

We are interested in how long when we use this tense. What we want to know is how long the action has been happening. For example:

“I’ve been working a lot at the university lately.”

Now look at the following expressions of time and using the present perfect progressive produce sentences that are true for you:

- for two weeks
- since last year
- for my whole life
- for 5 years
- recently
- since 2015
- for 10 years
- this year
- since April
- since 2010
- an hour
- a day
- this week
- this month
- recently
- lately
